

HOW WE HELP YOUR PET

Most think of anesthetic protocols as our primary responsibility, but an anesthesiologist does so much more:

- Conduct a thorough physical exam
- Evaluate the animal's condition and any disease that may impact their response to anesthesia
- Meet with you and explain the anesthetic care your pet will receive
- Prescribe or guide treatment to stabilize a patient and increase pre-anesthetic safety of the patient
- Create a customized pre-procedure pain management plan
- Directly oversee the administration of anesthesia, monitoring heart function, blood pressure, and respiration
- Monitor, diagnose, and treat anesthetic related complications that may arise and keep a medical record
- Recommend or provide treatment for post-operative and/or chronic pain

For more information, please ask your veterinarian or visit our website at sevetanesthesia.com

SOUTHEAST VETERINARY ANESTHESIA SERVICES

EXPERT ANESTHESIA AND PAIN MANAGEMENT
SERVICES FOR YOUR PET

ANESTHESIA AND YOUR PET

– KEEPING THEM SAFE AND COMFORTABLE

Just hearing that your pet must undergo anesthesia can elicit fear. Most of the time, your veterinarian can manage both anesthesia and the procedure itself. However, there are times when a pet would benefit by the added expertise of a board-certified anesthesiologist.

Anesthesiologists in private practice are quite rare in veterinary medicine.

Dr. Ovbey and Southeast Veterinary Anesthesia Services are unique in that they are available to help veterinarians throughout the region care for those pets who may be at higher risk.

MANAGING ANESTHETIC RISKS

Because every anesthetic episode includes a measure of risk, we proactively prepare to minimize the onset of complications. We consider pre-existing conditions (kidney or heart disease) and take into account breed-specific predispositions. Based on the pet's medical history and thorough examination, the anesthetic protocol is carefully created for each individual patient.

MEET OUR SPECIALIST

– DIANNA OVBEY, DVM, MS, DACVAA

AMERICAN COLLEGE OF VETERINARY ANESTHESIA
AND ANALGESIA

Board-certified veterinary anesthesiologist and pain management specialist, Dr. Dianna Ovbey, is an expert – one you want on your pet's team when they require anesthesia for a procedure.

Dr. Ovbey has provided care in both academic and private practice settings on both small and large animals. She has worked in conjunction with specialists in nearly every field including surgery, dentistry, radiation oncology, internal medicine, neurology, and ER/critical care.

Because of her credentials and exclusive focus on the safe administration of anesthesia and pain management, Dr. Ovbey is uniquely qualified to provide the most advanced care from examination to induction, through recovery and restoration of quality of life.

OUR SOLE FOCUS IS THE SAFETY AND COMFORT OF YOUR PET FROM PREMEDICATION THROUGH RECOVERY FROM ANESTHESIA.

